Bucket List

Do you have a “bucket list”? You know, that’s the list of events, people to meet, activities to enjoy and more that you hope to fulfill in your lifetime. Last April, I was able to check-off one item on my list after I attended the culmination of March Madness—the NCAA Men’s Basketball Final Four in Houston. The experience was as grand as I had imagined, but I have to admit that it happened because I am a member of the NCAA Division III President’s Council.

While the philosophy that underpins NCAA Division I athletics (Final Four) is different from NCAA Division III athletics (Gwynedd-Mercy College), there’s no doubt that the competitive spirit and drive to win is evident among students at both levels. As you read this magazine, you will meet some of our student-athletes and hear about their successes both on and off the field/court.

One of the major differences between NCAA Division I athletics and NCAA Division III athletics has to do with the breadth of experiences anticipated for our Division III student-athletes. While our students are as competitive as any and certainly strive to win, they also want to immerse themselves in all the other opportunities that are a part of the collegiate experience. At Division III institutions, we have shorter practice and playing seasons; red-shirting is not permitted, i.e., only four years of athletic eligibility are permitted to complete a four-year degree program; study-abroad and internship experiences are encouraged; participation in other student activities is valued, e.g., Voices of Gwynedd, Alternative Spring Break, Student Government, and so much more.

I am sure many of you are as astounded as I am by the many balls our students are able to simultaneously bounce. First, and foremost, they are committed to their academic obligations. A close second, however, includes a commitment to their sport and teammates, while not diminishing their high regard for the Mercy value of “service,” which is a required component of all student athletes’ team-experience at Gwynedd-Mercy College. Last year, many of our student-athletes participated in the Polar Bear Plunge—a dip into the Jersey Shore ocean in January by our conference athletes to raise funds for Special Olympics. Ouch...just the thought of an ocean dip in January is hard for me to imagine!

As you no doubt realize, my “bucket list” includes way more than attending the NCAA Final Four...it includes the preparation of the next generation of Distinctive Mercy Graduates. This is a “bucket list” item that we are actualizing together. I am overwhelmed by the extraordinary support of alumni, faculty/staff, friends, and benefactors, who enable the preparation of today’s Mercy-influenced leaders. My goal is for the college to prepare graduates who are professionally competent in their discipline or professional field; who have a foundation in liberal learning, i.e., persons who can think, write, speak, act, influence, and do so much more in today’s global society; and persons who own a humble and compassionate sense of excellence in service to humanity. None of this would be possible without your generous support. For this, I express my great appreciation and sincere gratitude.

Kathleen Owens, PhD
President

Casey Dellostretto

Student + Athlete = Not Now, I'm Busy

Being a Division-III athlete is a lot like working a temporary job. Well, that is, if you love your job and don't mind going in everyday without receiving compensation. Every athlete at Gwynedd-Mercy College understands that, for their four years of eligibility, scholarship money is not made available for things like tuition, housing and book fees.

That's where the student comes into the equation. Acquiring a degree validates the countless hours of studying, scrimmaging and managing a relentless schedule. This year's President's Report showcases the devotion of four student-athletes. Seniors Casey Dellostretto and Matt Van Den Hengel along with junior Josh Martin and sophomore Maura Gifford have had both academic and athletic success. In the coming years, they will use these experiences as a springboard into the workforce, representing their "Griffin Pride" along the way.

■ Casey Dellostretto

You could say that Casey Dellostretto is a bit of a torchbearer. As one of two seniors on the team, the education major is carrying the light of a field hockey team that was in a much different place three years ago.

In 2008—Dellostretto's freshman year—the program didn't even have a home field to host games. They "carpooled" with neighboring high school Gwynedd Mercy Academy, often taking a backseat to their athletics. Waiting patiently for games to end, the Griffins squirmed as the sun dipped into the unlit field's horizon. Shortened and cancelled practices contributed to a year of disappointment.

A turbulent first season helped to build character for Dellostretto, who hasn't allowed a losing campaign since the team migrated to the College's state-of-the-art turf field in her sophomore year. The self-proclaimed "turf princess" is now serving as team captain. Not only by default, but through lessons learned at Gwynedd-Mercy College, Dellostretto has become an athletic and academic leader on campus.

"As a captain I've learned that people do look up to you and respect your opinion," Dellostretto said. "[Professors] say that they have seen us grow from freshman year to junior year and how competent we've gotten."

One of those professors, Cathy McGeehan, PhD, has witnessed the evolution firsthand. In the four classes she taught to Dellostretto (also serving as an advisor), adjustments were made to accommodate field hockey commitments.

"She was very proactive," McGeehan said. "Casey always gave me schedules upfront in an effort to align athletic events with academics."

Studying to become a teacher, Dellostretto spends her time chasing a triple certification. The degree she will receive at the end of her tenure at Gwynedd-Mercy College is one that she couldn't have received at other local colleges. It was a driving factor in her ultimate decision to come to campus as a wide-eyed freshman.

“The biggest thing was the education program because I’m coming out triple-certified in elementary, special and early childhood [education] and no other school has that,” Dellostretto said.

If she needed any additional incentive to attend GMC, it was her sister Colleen Dellostretto who was a standout athlete of her own for the women’s lacrosse team. The elder sibling finished her collegiate career in the spring of 2011 by winning a Colonial States Athletic Conference championship. Casey also has her sights fixed on hoisting some late-season hardware during the twilight of her career as a Griffin.

As the battle for this final goal is waged, Dellostretto finds herself with one more semester to tidy up remaining coursework. The years of multitasking have undoubtedly paid off, and the support of the GMC community has played a role in her path to success.

“Since being here I found [being a student-athlete] easier to manage because your professors know you by name and you aren’t just a number,” Dellostretto said.

If Dellostretto can lead 10 other teammates on the pitch, she should have no problem corralling students in her classroom. There was a time when looking into the eyes of an expectant group of her peers was a daunting proposition, however, those fears have disappeared. In four seemingly short years at Gwynedd-Mercy College, she has realized something that others always saw in her.

“Casey just has the drive to be successful,” fifth year field hockey head coach Laura-Ann Lane said.

These lessons in leadership have made Dellostretto a bright beacon heading straight for a promising future.

■ Matt Van Den Hengel

Whether it’s the rhythmic sound of pounding pavement or the crunching of a less traversed back country path, Matt Van Den Hengel is at peace. The obscure moments spent carving through a tailor made trail are reminders of why his favorite mode of transportation is his own two legs.

The senior marketing major from Mechanicsburg, Pa. is a member of Gwynedd-Mercy College’s men’s cross country team. With nearly seven of eight semesters complete, Van Den Hengel can nostalgically reflect on his experience living a double-life—as a student-athlete.

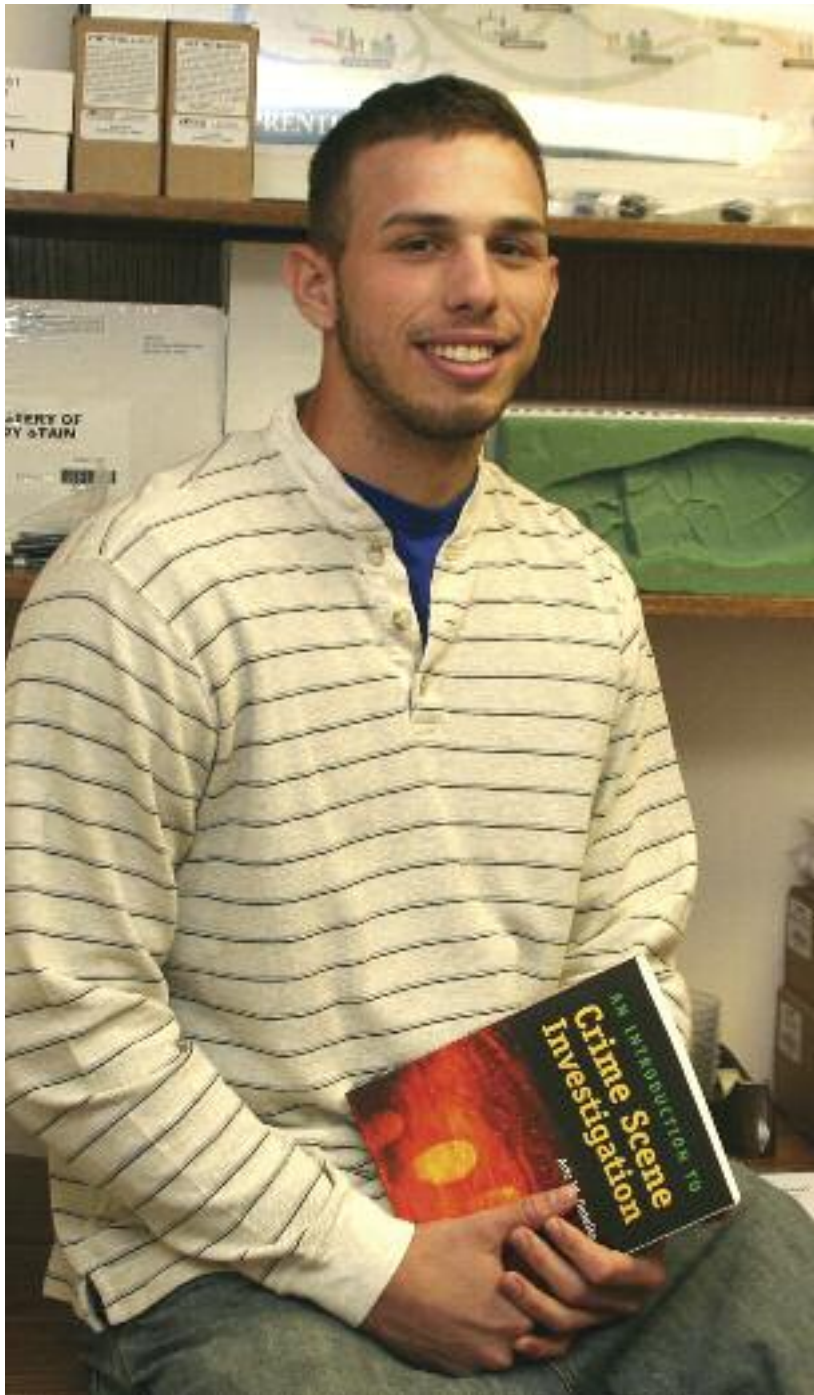

Homework can come in a variety of forms. Each week—as a part of head coach Mike Dager’s curriculum—Van Den Hengel is required to run 70-80 miles. It may seem like cruel and unusual punishment, but it’s not—it’s just standard procedure for the fifth year coach.

Formerly the women’s cross country coach at Elizabethtown College, Dager coached Van Den Hengel’s sister, Megan, during her 2006-2007 freshman year. It was around then that he made a connection with a wiry, but promising high school junior. By the spring of 2008, Dager was actively recruiting Van Den Hengel to join him as a member of his first recruiting class for Gwynedd-Mercy College’s men’s program.

Matt Van Den Hengel

Josh Martin

Van Den Hengel was originally motivated to follow his sister's footsteps at Elizabethtown College, but a visit to Gwynedd-Mercy College's campus shifted his perspective.

"I came and looked at Gwynedd-Mercy College and loved it from the start. The team, the whole atmosphere, the small classes and everything about it," Van Den Hengel said.

After he began classes in the fall of 2008, Van Den Hengel found some of his fellow freshman falling into common pitfalls. Newfound freedoms splintered the focus and hindered productivity of his peers. Van Den Hengel never really had the luxury of distraction. Bouncing between coursework and athletic obligations, he found challenges in his first semester on campus. He admits that isolating the "student" and the "athlete" would be nearly impossible. It was a tug-of-war between commitments.

"I knew I wanted to [run in college] anyway, but if I didn't I'd probably go crazy," Van Den Hengel admits. "I feel like it helps me—even with less time to study—it helps me to focus on my classes," he added.

If "Phase I" was getting acquainted with being a student-athlete, "Phase II" would be a reintroduction. After two years of being in the School of Education, Van Den Hengel would change majors and move to the School of Business. Since the switch, he has taken six classes per semester to ensure his graduation date will remain in May 2012.

As a well-rounded upperclassman, Van Den Hengel has been able to find ways to impart wisdom on those who begin to make their ascent from freshman to senior. About ten hours a week you can find him at the Academic Resource Center tutoring business-related subjects. Most of this volunteer work will illuminate his résumé from the rest of a competitive job market, and Van Den Hengel is no stranger to separating from a pack.

Learning about everything from running his own business to marketing various products, he's acquired all of the tools to conquer whatever comes next. The course he's charting this time around, though, is leading him to a career.

■ Josh Martin

When you're in the prime of your career, there's no ceiling. The body and mind are a united front in allowing an athlete to perform at their highest abilities. Junior Criminal Justice major and centerfielder Josh Martin is on the verge of his own crescendo. So, why is he thinking about retirement?

It's inevitable that one day, Martin will no longer possess this feeling of invincibility. After these next two seasons, his competitive playing days may be officially over. That's why he's preparing for life after baseball with a fulfilling education here at Gwynedd-Mercy College.

By the time he was four years old, Martin had already laced up his cleats and began stuffing his mitt with ground balls. His father and older brother, Matt, bonded over one of America's great family sports. A mild curiosity turned into a full blown passion somewhere between then and high school. Matt would be the first to don the Griffins' uniform, graduating in 2008. When Josh accepted an offer to play at Shippensburg University that same spring, it appeared as though he wouldn't follow suit.

Martin spent his first fall semester of college preparing for the upcoming baseball season. However, a debilitating injury, in which the rotator cuff in his throwing arm was torn, amounted to a "lost season." He retained a year of eligibility by redshirting his 2009 campaign, but a change of scenery and unique opportunity presented itself at Gwynedd-Mercy College.

"I chose here because my brother went here and he liked the school," Martin said. "I knew it was a good academic school, and because there is life after sports, you have to look towards your career."

Nearly three years removed from his shoulder injury, Martin is flourishing as the multi-tool asset he was recruited to be. Statistically speaking, he owns a .345 lifetime collegiate batting average and a GPA greater than 3.5. He's been named as one of the captains for the 2012 season by head coach Paul Murphy.

"[Josh] leads the team in more ways than one, by being in the weight room, going to class and getting good grades. The other guys see that and respond," Murphy said.

Although he knew baseball would be a variable in his college selection, academics were also a major selling point. The Criminal Justice Program appealed to Martin because of the prospect of entering the police force upon graduation. He noted that the faculty members at Gwynedd-Mercy College have already been on the front lines, experiencing the best and worst of the field.

Ideally, Martin's occupational path will take him through the Pennsylvania State Police Academy. Further down the road, he envisions a job with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It's not the luster of a badge that attracts Martin, but the responsibility that comes with it. He simply feels that it's a respectable and appropriate career choice.

Martin can't have one success without the other's credit and the years of juggling, balancing and moving at a breakneck pace have certainly helped crystallize his future aspirations. His formal "divorce" from collegiate baseball is still two years off, but the idea of leaving the game is difficult to comprehend.

"It's hard to put into words how much you love the sport," Martin said. "It will definitely be tough to stop playing when it's all said and done, but the memories will be good and it will be fun to look back on those experiences."

■ Maura Gifford

Before Maura Gifford was born, it was probably safe to assume that she was predestined to be a soccer player. Her father kicked it competitively for Ursinus College. Her older brother was in the infancy of a future collegiate career of his own. Naturally, when she reached the age of five, Gifford received her first education in the sport.

Fifteen years later, as a sophomore elementary education major, she's accumulating the accolades here at Gwynedd-Mercy College—not only with her foot on the field, but with her head in the classroom. That's a balance she couldn't compromise. It was important to find an outlet for a sport that she can't live without, while pursuing a degree that she can make a living with someday.

"I knew that I definitely wanted to play soccer in college," Gifford said. "I was looking for Elementary Education and GMC was really strong, so that definitely helped narrow down the choice."

Like any freshman adapting to college, Gifford gradually acclimated to her new surroundings. However, with the advent of soccer season, the foreign turned into the familiar. Being on her own and shouldering more responsibility was made easier by teammates who were under the same set of circumstances.

"It was definitely different," Gifford said. "The whole environment, not living at home, but I guess coming into a fall sport as a freshman I got to meet people before school actually started."

Gifford went on to start 17 of 20 games at center-mid, a position that splits time between both ends of the field. She would finish in a tie for third in points, earning the respect of the coaching staff almost immediately.

"We were looking for someone that is more of a playmaker; someone who could settle the ball and be composed under pressure," head coach Neil Johnson said. "Maura's a silent leader, with her play speaking volumes for itself."

When Gifford isn't in cleats, she's likely buried in her books. A continuous cycle meets her every morning—class, practice, studying, repeat. It's a commitment she wouldn't trade for anything. A deep-seeded passion for competition drives her to succeed in everything she does. This includes challenging herself to take courses in the College's esteemed Honors Program. Piling on the obligations, she is also heavily involved in other campus activities such as T.A.G. (Teams and Groups) Student Leadership Program, Adult Services, and the Education Club. Ideally, all of these experiences will help her reach a target goal of becoming an educator in the region.

"Another reason I picked Gwynedd-Mercy College was that I knew I wanted to stay in this area, so you make your connections [locally]," Gifford said.

This fall, a highly-concentrated roster of education courses has increased Gifford's workload. She will be improving her teaching skills with practical coursework in science, physical education and other subjects. Getting better at presenting information to children of all skill levels is part of the process as well. Gifford knows that her academic hourglass is still lined with grains of sand, but determination has prevented any unnecessary erosion of time. She understands that teaching jobs are in demand and setting herself apart from the fray will be imperative towards finding work after graduation. Gwynedd-Mercy College's celebrated reputation for preparing teachers is just one of the reasons Gifford will find success upon her departure. The competitive spirit of a lifelong athlete is another.

A Recap of Excellence

Student-athletes are often portrayed as role models for their expertise and prowess in regards to their sport. Gwynedd-Mercy College's Red and Gold brigade never backs down from a challenge in pursuit of victory. This competitive nature also translates in the classroom.

During the course of the 2010-2011 academic year, a total of 60 Griffin student-athletes were named to the Colonial States Athletic Conference Fall All-Academic team. This achievement is a feat that takes perseverance and concentration of the highest degree. Maintaining a balance between academics and athletics is always stressed, but these student-athletes have exceeded expectations. The acclaimed Griffins spanned a total of seven different sports and were recognized by CSAC commissioner Amy Friedman.

"These student-athletes have assumed leadership roles on their campuses by demonstrating that a complete education includes both academics and athletics," remarked Commissioner Friedman.

The leaders who have been recognized are proof that Gwynedd-Mercy College students are successful in the classroom and on the field of battle. They set the tone as they combine their physical and mental attributes in a way to further the mission and advancement of campus tradition and pride.

Among the Gwynedd-Mercy College recipients, three students received particular acclaim. They include recent graduates; Heather Morgan '11 (All-Area Academic Team), Jon Crabtree '11 (NABC Honors Court), and current junior Zach Richter (All-Area Academic Team). Each of the awards required a cumulative grade point average of 3.2 or higher.

Richter stood out among his teammates in men's lacrosse by totaling 10 caused turnovers, 13 groundballs while playing in all 15 regular season games. Morgan assisted in returning women's tennis to their third consecutive CSAC Championship and the NCAA Tournament. She went 16-6 in singles and 16-3 in doubles play. Crabtree led men's basketball with 17.6 points per game. He also led in three-pointers made, and came in third in rebounding.

For the second consecutive year, the men's cross country squad earned the "Highest GPA" award among campus teams. Furthermore, both the men's and women's teams won the NCAA Division III Cross Country National Academic Award. This is achieved, in part, by notching a cumulative GPA better than 3.10.

Friends and alumni are encouraged to contribute to any of the scholarships and grants that the College makes available to help students reach their educational goals. ## Foundation Maximizes Abilities of Children with Disabilities

The Gwynedd-Mercy College Autism Institute, a program of the School of Education, received a generous grant in June 2011 from the Child Development Foundation. The grant project is designed to encourage educators to use twenty-first century assistive technologies to improve the way children on the autism spectrum learn. The funds will be used to purchase software, iPads® and video modeling equipment that will be integrated into the Institute's professional development workshops. More than 200 teachers, school administrators and family members participate in the Institute's programs each year. In addition, education students enrolled in undergraduate and graduate programs will use the new technology.

The grant comes at a pivotal moment in the field of special education. Children on the autism spectrum often struggle with interpersonal communication, a daily function that for most is second nature. Emerging technologies empower these children to converse more effectively. At Gwynedd-Mercy College, our teachers understand the importance of mastering the tools that foster a level of interaction that was previously unavailable.

In May 2011, R. Kurtz Holloway, Esq., president of the Child Development Foundation, visited campus to discuss the pending grant application. During his visit, he observed Kristin Panacio, a senior student teacher, demonstrate the requested software on an iPad®. Kristin is now teaching students on the autism spectrum in the Central Bucks School District. Recently, Mr. Holloway commented, "You're training teachers to work with these children and I can't think of another grant application that was specifically for that. Not being in the field, I did not understand how allowing a child to direct attention to a device while holding a conversation with another individual really allowed that child to communicate better. It was an easy decision by the board to approve this grant request."

Based in Montgomery County, Pa., the Child Development Foundation provides support and resources for programs that assist children with disabilities to maximize their potential. The Autism Institute was founded in 2007, due in large part to funding from the Child Development Foundation.

"We give our heartfelt appreciation to the Child Development Foundation for their continued support," remarked Deborah Schadler, PhD, coordinator of undergraduate special education, assistant professor and director of The Autism Institute. "Truly, there would not be an Institute without them."

Christine Barrasso '65

Although some time has passed since I was a fixture on campus, I still remember how it was the perfect fit for me. The Mercy values that I was given have influenced my life in a multitude of ways, but I think it all comes back to the individual attention that I received from the caring faculty there. As a Catholic institution, it instilled a set of values in me and by donating every year to the annual fund, I know I'm helping future generations encounter the same personal experience I had.

My Gwynedd-Mercy College experience was a very positive one. I think it gave me a great deal of self-confidence, it taught me the necessary skills that I needed when I went out into the job market, and it allowed me to capitalize on further education at a higher level. I think the groundwork that I received at the College was a factor for my continuing education throughout my career and I want to give back as much as I can.

It is important that you set your goals and expectations high and stay true to yourself in order to achieve greatness. In order to achieve success, it is crucial to remain who you are as an individual. It sets you apart from the crowd and when coupled with the guidance you're receiving at Gwynedd-Mercy College, it will bear a fruitful postgraduate career.

I realize that some alumni might be undecided in terms of donating, but my advice on the matter links directly to a personal mantra I've adopted in my professional life—just do it. Why hinder the educational advancement of our nation's future? I was able to go on and obtain my masters degree, but that would not have been possible without the foundation that was established by our beloved school; the heart of the Gwynedd Valley.

"I think the groundwork that I received at the College was a factor for my continuing education throughout my career and I want to give back as much as I can."

Elizabeth “Bettie” M. Iaquinto ’80

There is something mystical about this place. Gwynedd-Mercy College just feels like home and I owe that to the members of this community. I have such wonderful and heartfelt appreciation for the individualized care that the faculty and Department of Education extended to me during my time here, but specifically in a time of need.

It was junior year and I had suffered an injury to my back. While undergoing treatment for a ruptured disk and resting to regain my former health, I was worried that I would not be able to continue with my studies and keep up with my classmates. One of my professors, Sister Virginia Hasson, RSM, PhD, made sure that everything was taken care of and tailored everything to my individual circumstances.

That ideal of compassion and community made me feel like part of the Gwynedd-Mercy College family. You know the people walking through campus and you recognize them in your classes. It's a unique feeling. It makes me think of the current students and how they need to think outside of the box and be as creative as possible. Gwynedd-Mercy College allows them to do just that and the advice that they receive from the staff comes from experience and is always trustworthy. I was hired after my first job interview because of a tightly-woven network of support.

My husband always said that it's important to give to the community (and give as much as you can). You always get it back in some way. I think there's a loyalty you should have to those faculty members and partners that qualified you to be such a viable commodity for the working force. I did go on to get my master's in special education. Because the College instilled in me a love of learning, specifically in special education—that's why I went forward for my advanced degree.

Had it not been for a one-of-a-kind experience at Gwynedd-Mercy College and the wonderful desire to learn, I would have not gone on to get my masters. They give you that love of learning.

“I think there’s a loyalty you should have to those teachers and partners that qualified you to be such a viable commodity for the working force.”

A student in the Respiratory Care Program demonstrates the ALS Simulator.

Established in 2006 by President Kathleen Owens, PhD, the President's Excellence Fund supports students and faculty with scholarships for special projects, service learning and travel abroad experiences. During the 2010-2011 academic year:

- The College partnered with Teachscape, a company that provides industry-leading technology for the education market. Student teachers will be filmed and evaluated in their classrooms to gain feedback and help them improve skills. Gwynedd-Mercy College is one of the few colleges in the nation to offer this remarkable teaching aid.
- Associate professor Dona Molyneux, PhD, attended the Carlow University Round Table in Carlow, Ireland. The educational discussion focused on teaching in Mercy mission-centered institutions and the role of "Catholic Social Teaching."
- Service projects were conducted through the College's Alternative Spring Break. More than 30 students helped communities in New York City, Cincinnati, Ohio and Baltimore, Maryland.
- Faculty and staff traveled to Nebraska for the Mercy Higher Education Retreat, where they discussed the value of being a part of a Mercy Catholic institution.
- The Respiratory Care Program purchased three major pieces of equipment to aid learning. An ALS Simulator from Laerdal is a lifelike mannequin that can be used to diagnose breathing issues. A ventilator from Care Fusion called "The Vela" is a patient ventilator interface. Finally, the SpiroLab III from Stock Medical can be used to evaluate patient breathing mechanics.

If you would like to make a gift to the President's Excellence Fund, please mark your donation with a designated fund and send to Gwynedd-Mercy College, or call 215-641-5550.

Your Annual Fund Gift Impacts GMC Students

Your gift to the Annual Fund provides vital scholarship support. Last year, the College awarded $12.6 million in scholarships, which benefited more than 92 percent of our students. A Catholic education in conjunction with our commitment to serving others produces distinguished Mercy graduates.

In addition, your Annual Fund contributions support countless campus initiatives that make a significant impact on our students. The student activities office was moved into a larger, more inviting area in the Waldron Center, giving student groups a place to meet and plan social activities. Our Center for Lifelong Learning Fort Washington campus was relocated to an upgraded facility in East Norriton. Classrooms are equipped with “smart room” capabilities and wireless technology. The College also launched a web portal to enhance communication among students, faculty and staff.

We truly appreciate your contributions to the Annual Fund as these initiatives would not be possible without your continued support.

Don't Let a Slow Economy Dampen Your Generous Spirit!

Leave a lasting legacy for your alma mater by including Gwynedd-Mercy College in your estate plans. There are countless ways to remember the College in your estate planning by becoming a member of the Mother Mary Bernard Graham Society. Your gift, no matter how large or small, will make an impact on our students for many years to come.

Special benefits of membership include:

- An invitation to the Mother Mary Bernard Graham Society annual reception
- Recognition at the annual Founders' Society reception for major donors
- Exclusive correspondence from President Kathleen Owens, PhD
- VIP invitations to select College events

■ Academics

New Faculty in the Fold

Robert N. Funk, PhD, was named interim vice president for academic affairs. His 50-plus years in higher education stem from positions as provost and dean of faculty at Hood College in Maryland and president of Cornish College of Arts in Seattle. Dr. Funk earned a Doctor of Philosophy from Stanford University, a Bachelor of Arts in English, and a Bachelor of Laws from the University of Oregon. Sandra D. Mangano, EdD, was also tabbed to be the new dean of the School of Education. Dr. Mangano has been an adjunct instructor at Gwynedd-Mercy College for 25 years. She was previously the assistant superintendent for the Radnor Township School District in Wayne, Pa.

Assistant Professor Brigid O'Brien Travels to Ghana

To learn about the culture and history of Ghana, Brigid O'Brien set off on an excursion across the Atlantic Ocean. She explored the "slave castles" of Cape Coast and presented in a conference on pre-natal development. Using the experience as a teaching point for her Society and Global Diversity class, the assistant professor of psychology also presented her research to students and faculty at a campus Common Hour.

Philadelphia Mural Arts Project Pays Tribute to Nursing Program

As presented in the spring 2011 Today magazine, Gwynedd-Mercy College's Nursing Program is depicted in a downtown Philadelphia mural titled "The Evolving Face of Nursing." The site, located at Broad and Vine streets, was created by artist Meg Saligman to reflect the spirit and rich tradition of nursing. A mix of current students and recent alumni represent the College on the canvas.

Student Lobby Day Hits Harrisburg

Pennsylvania State Representative Kate Harper and a staffer from Senator Stuart Greenleaf's office met with students who traveled to Harrisburg for Student Lobby Day. A focal point of the discussion was financial aid packages and how they would affect students at Gwynedd-Mercy College.

Undergraduate Research Conference Highlights Student Work

Held for the first time, students were encouraged to present coursework to peers and members of the faculty on campus. Twenty-seven students were nominated to showcase their research on topics such as science, history and psychology. The keynote address was given by Dr. Geoffrey Kelly, professor of religious studies at La Salle University.

High Marks Received by GMC

Last fall, Gwynedd-Mercy College was recognized on U.S. News and World Report's list of "Best Colleges." The exclusive rankings, which include more than 1,400 institutions nationwide, put the College in the first tier of its category, "Best Regional Universities in the North." Leading factors for the acknowledgement are Gwynedd-Mercy College's impressive graduation rates, financial resources and alumni giving.

Lennon Alexander '11, Nulah Kerkulah '12, Guinnevere Conte '12 and Kathryn Ricciardi '14 had the opportunity to meet with State Representative Kate Harper (center) during Student Lobby Day.

Volunteer Work Lands Gwynedd-Mercy College on the "Honor Roll"

For the sixth straight year, Gwynedd-Mercy College has made the President's Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll, presented by The Corporation for National and Community Service. It's the highest recognition a college can achieve for a commitment to civic engagement. More than 27,000 hours were spent by students on volunteer projects for 2010-11.

■ Campus Life

Hot Rides for Heroes

The Psychology Club hosted a car show to support veterans with post traumatic stress disorder. Participants from the region were asked to bring their classic cars to campus for the day. The family-friendly event provided games, raffles, food and hope for those struggling with the lingering effects of combat. Trophies were awarded to the show's most impressive hot rods and motorcycles.

Mercy Week 2010

The Mercy Museum kicked off a weeklong commemoration around campus. Assumption Hall hosted an exhibit showcasing 150 years of the presence of the Sisters of Mercy in Philadelphia and the teachings they passed on. Sister Mary Scullion, RSM, director of Project H.O.M.E., a non-profit organization that provides housing and services to the homeless, was the featured speaker at the Academic Convocation. Festivities concluded with traditional Mass and tea on Mercy Day.

Homecoming Weekend Honors Past Athletics

During Homecoming Weekend 2010, two of the College's past champions were honored for their successes. The weekend marked the 10th anniversary of championships for the baseball team and women's basketball team. A special tribute was paid in recognition of their accomplishments.

National Political Columnist Dick Polman Speaks on Campus

In the spirit of National Constitution Day, Philadelphia Inquirer staff writer Dick Polman gave a lecture on Sept. 16. A frequent guest on C-Span, MSNBC, CNN and NPR, Polman discussed the need for civility during presidential campaigns.

SEPCHE First Annual Accounting Career Fair

In September, students and recent alums were invited to jumpstart their careers with an Accounting Career Fair held on campus. Created by the School of Business and Office of Career Services, 12 potential employers reached out to more than 50 students who attended.

"Bringing Mercy to America" One-Woman Play

Continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Sisters of Mercy in Philadelphia, Gwynedd-Mercy College held a one-woman play titled "Frances Warde: Bringing Mercy to America." The play depicted the life of Warde, a Sister of Mercy, who brought the order to America from Carlow, Ireland in 1843.

MERV posed with alumni at the turf field during Homecoming Weekend.

Assumption Hall was transformed into a museum to kick off Mercy Week's 150th anniversary.

Michaela Brass '11, president of the Psychology Club, showed her 1970 Dodge Challenger at the Hot Rides for Heroes event.

Dick Polman spoke to students about the need for civility in presidential campaigns.

Laughs for Lives Comedy Show

Philadelphia-based comedians David James and Ryan Hill brought their unique blend of humor to campus to support a good cause. James was named as Helium Comedy Club's best comedian in 2009. Both acts performed to students and faculty with proceeds going to support Crusade for Care. More than $300 was raised for the foundation, which aids patients being treated at Fox Chase Cancer Center.

New Health and Wellness Center Opens

In November 2010, a new facility in Loyola Hall was created to help students manage good health while on campus. The existing campus health center was expanded to include two exam rooms and a waiting room that can accommodate basic patient care. Numerous seminars on health and wellness are also held throughout the year.

The Valley Players Present "Chekhov's Ladies"

Gwynedd-Mercy College's own acting troupe consisting of students and alumni brought the show to campus in late-March. Esteemed playwright and former full-time English professor Jules Tasca directed the Players' first performance in three years.

Voices of Gwynedd Entertain in Philadelphia and New Orleans

The Voices of Gwynedd honored the Sisters of Mercy and their 150 years of service in Philadelphia by taking part in a "Circle of Mercy" concert at the Kimmel Center in downtown Philadelphia. In the summer, the group took their themed show "Hear America Singing" to New Orleans for performances at the famed St. Louis Cathedral and the Steamboat Natchez. While visiting the city, the Voices of Gwynedd also took part in a service project to benefit victims of Hurricane Katrina.

Senior Education Major Earns National Award

Steven Rufe '12 was honored with the Newman Civic Fellowship Award from Campus Compact. Presented to 135 students from 30 different states, the award distinguishes those who show an investment in finding solutions to challenges facing communities across the country. Each week, Rufe travels to the United Nations in New York City, where he is working on a national curriculum for school-age children.

The Voices of Gwynedd performed at the famed St. Louis Cathedral in New Orleans.

■ Service

First Year Experience Service Day Tackles Community Projects

As part of freshman orientation, students were sent to more than ten locations in Montgomery County and Philadelphia to complete various service projects. Among the benefitting organizations were Best Buddies, Ornaments for Troops, Cradles to Crayons, Norristown Hospital and Mercy Neighborhood Ministries of Philadelphia, Inc. Some socialized with the elderly and mentally challenged, while others put their culinary skills to the test in the kitchen.

Homelessness Awareness Week Sleep Out

The Sleep Out for Awareness was the culminating event of last year's Hunger and Homelessness Awareness Week. The purpose of the event was to raise awareness about the plight of homeless people. Mercy Works supplied cardboard boxes, and the students brought their own blankets and pillows. In the morning they headed over to Visitation House for a hot breakfast.

Holiday Dreams Come True

It's always the season of giving at Gwynedd-Mercy College, but last year, Campus Ministry delivered gifts to 110 children in the Before and After Child Care Program for Mercy Ministries of Philadelphia, Inc. Students, faculty and staff also donated gifts to those served by Mercy Neighborhood Ministries' day program for adults with special needs. Over the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, hundreds of grocery bags were given to less fortunate families.

Touch of Tennis Receives National Service Award

The United States Tennis Association (USTA) recognized Gwynedd-Mercy College's Touch of Tennis clinic with its 2010 National Adaptive Service Award. Touch of Tennis is a free clinic for community members with special needs. Jim Holt, who is both GMC's head tennis coach and special education teacher at Wordsworth Academy, began the program in 1998.

MLK Day of Service Delivers Food, Supplies to Those in Need

Nearly 55 students and faculty participated in a service effort that prepared nutritious snack bags for children and breakfast bags for seniors. The meals were delivered by the Archdiocesan Nutritional Development Services and Aid for Friends, respectively. Book donations were also made to schools in Conshohocken, Camden and overseas to Ghana.

Alternative Spring Break 2011: New York, Baltimore and Cincinnati

In a continued commitment to service projects, Gwynedd-Mercy College sent 27 students to three cities this year to provide support to the underprivileged. In Cincinnati, students threw a party for senior citizens. In Baltimore, students spent time at an Adult Learning Center and in New York City they read books to young children. These were just some of the many highlights.

Freshmen prepared meals for Manna on Main Street as part of the FYE Service Day.

Sarah Tefft '12 participated in the Sleep Out for Awareness event.

Supporting the Annual Fund

Nearly every campus initiative that makes a significant impact for our students is supported by the Annual Fund, including scholarship support for those students who need it most. Last year, Gwynedd-Mercy College awarded $12.6 million in scholarships, which benefited more than 92 percent of our students. The future of our campus is bright with the help from caring alumni like you.

Support Gwynedd-Mercy College students with a gift to the 2011-2012 Annual Fund today.
